

CITADEL SCENERY

To coincide with the release of Warhammer, this month sees the initial releases of a new range of hardened foam scenery and a static grass battlemat. This superbly detailed scenery is not only nearly indestructible but also comes pre-painted and flocked so that you can use it straight out of the bag!

Safe on top of the ruined tower, Empire archers fire upon the Orcs below.

Skaven Gutter Runners attack an Empire Battle Wizard in a Warhammer Skirmish game.

Positioning your troops behind the new Citadel walls and hedges makes it harder for your opponent to shoot or attack them.

Deploying on the new two-tier Citadel hill gives your missile troops an excellent field of fire.

You can remove the second tier of the Citadel hill, giving you a lot more space to set up on the main hill. You can then use the second tier as a smaller hill or as more cover for your army (see right).

The new Citadel ruined tower is a very impressive terrain feature. It makes a fantastic centre piece and objective to fight over on the battlefield. As you can see from the various photographs, you can use it in your games of Warhammer and Warhammer 40,000.

We will be producing more impressive terrain pieces like the Ruined tower in the future. These large pieces are made in very limited numbers, so once they're out of stock they are out of stock forever!

From the cover of the Citadel barricades, the Guardsmen will strike first when the Orcs assault.

In addition to the impressive ruined tower, designed by modelling guru Mark Jones, these first releases include a hill, Warhammer 40,000 barricades, walls, hedges and trees. To top this off there is a massive 6'x4' static grass battlemat to play over!

These initial releases will supply you with all the basic scenery that is commonly used in a game of Warhammer or Warhammer 40,000, allowing you to easily and instantly cover your gaming table with good looking, functional scenery.

Watch out for further releases in the coming months!

The new Citadel woods come in a bagged set of two large trees & six medium trees.

Ultramarines clash with Rapiers in the ruins of the tower.

Masters of Battle defend the tower's entrance from the evil Dark Eldar.